Required texts:
There is no textbook for this course. Readings are written by the instructor and other material (videos/internet) will also be used.

Course Description:
The subject of this course is contemporary Britain and the question of what it means to be “British” at the beginning of the twenty-first century. Describing the sense of British identity is a complex thing, in fact there are a range of British identities rooted in geography, history, politics, and tradition. Nationality and identity are about allegiance and a sense of being part of a culture, so an essential part of this course will be attempting to describe what we mean by British culture or even whether there is such a thing as a unified British culture.

General Overall and Attainment Objectives:
From the viewpoint of nurturing the ability to communicate with others during interaction with society and the world, to learn about the current status and issues for intercultural communication and about the diversity of foreign languages and the cultures behind them. Also, through the countries and regions where English is used, to deepen understanding of expressive ability using English and to master knowledge that will contribute to classes in foreign languages at junior high schools and senior high school. To understand the diversity of cultures in the world and the current status and issues for intercultural communication. Through exchanges with a wide range of cultural backgrounds, to gain an experiential understanding of the diversity of cultures and the significance of intercultural exchange. To understand the basic details of the history, society and cultures of the countries and regions where English is used.

General Learning Items
In this course we will look at intercultural communication and exchange, defined in a variety of ways and the history, society and culture of countries where English is used. This means primarily the British Isles but will also involve the interactions between cultures (both indigenous and not) within the British Isles and the interactions with the wider English speaking world.

Specific Course Goals/Objectives:
A primary focus of this course will be on how British people define being British based on divisions of: origins within the British Isles; class; religion; and origins outside the British Isles and how these contribute to the development of the various cultures of the British Isles. We will examine the history of British culture and identity, the range of identities that can be found, and how these identities have changed over time especially in recent years. Responses to the British nation state form important elements in the range of British identities. A part of the interest in British culture comes from the apparent contradictions many people feel between their cultural identity (a sense of belonging to a community and a sense of shared experience) and their assumed allegiance to a British nation state which has its own cultural identity. This is expressed through a variety of interactions and various types of intercultural communication. In this course we will examine these contradictions using regional identities (such as Wales and Scotland), class identities, religious identities, and ethnic identities (as in the “immigrant” communities) as the points of comparison. The complex relationships of Britain to Ireland, Britain to Europe, and Britain to the global community are all part of defining British identity and culture. We will also look at the changes in Britain’s relationship to Europe and at the issue of “post-imperial” and “post-colonial” identity in Britain as a whole and in particular communities within Britain.

Topics/Assignments:
The course is divided into three main sections:

i) An introduction to the British Isles, its history, and communities.

ii) An introduction to the social forces which have shaped the modern British Isles up to the 1980s

iii) An overview of the changes that have taken place since the 1980s into the present.

We will explore the themes of the class using a variety of materials: readings, recordings, videos, and Internet source materials. The class will include in-class exercises and homework assignments. There will be a final written or oral project in which each student will present an “in depth” study of a specific topic.

Grades and Grading:
B If you do not miss class and you satisfactorily complete all the class work.

C You can get this in two main ways: If you have three "Unexcused Absences" OR if you do NOT satisfactorily complete a major piece of class work

D You can get this in two main ways: If you have three "Unexcused Absences" AND if you do NOT satisfactorily complete a major piece of class work OR if you do NOT satisfactorily complete TWO major pieces of class work

F You have four or more "unexcused absences" and do NOT Withdraw from the class

So, how do you get an A? You have all of the requirements for a B AND you demonstrate "excellence" by active participation in the class. Participation means asking questions, answering questions, and demonstrating the willingness to try to work at a serious level. An A is NOT for "extra work" - there is no "extra work" required. An A is for the ability or willingness to do higher level work within the ordinary class work.
This mainly means participation. Ask questions! Answer questions! Volunteer! Make an effort!

Attendance Requirements:
Attendance on its own is not part of the final grade, however participation is. Participation is only possible if you are in class. If you have three 'unexcused absences' you will drop one letter grade (for example from a B to C). If you have four or more 'unexcused absences' you will be asked to withdraw from the class. An 'unexcused absence' is any absence for which you do not have permission. Medical reasons, family emergencies and so on are NOT counted as "unexcused absences" and will NOT INFLUENCE YOUR GRADE.

Homework Requirements:
All students are expected to work for 45 minutes to one hour before and after each class either in reviewing material or completing homework assignments.

All readings will be: 1) Pre-read; 2) Read aloud in class; 3) Selected vocabulary will be explained with examples of usage.
